How do we tell the stories of disaster? That is the question du jour, and it ' s also the question I put before my group of 28 undergrads in January, when we embarked on what would be my last time teaching a class I call Catastrophes and Hope at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine. The college is a residential liberal arts school with about 2,000 students.

In Teaching Stories of Disaster, Hope Lies Hidden in Plain:--

It is the hope of a glorified body in which to live (Philippians 3:20 – 21; 2 Thessalonians 1:10) and the hope of a new earth on which to live (2 Peter 3:13). Most importantly, it is the hope to live in these new glorified bodies on a new earth in the very presence of God Himself for all eternity (Revelation 21:2 – 4)—eternal life and joy in the presence of God (Psalm 16:11).
